PACST. An Excellent Lecture by Mrs. H. B. Beedy at the Y. M. C.A. Building. Many and various are the ways in which the benevolent people of Bangor have tried to lessen the rigor of winter for the needy. We all know this, but, perhaps, all are not aware that the society of Associated Charitles is endeavoring to gather a special fund for the sick among the poor, and that it was for this object that several friends of mankind gave, each something of his special gift, in the entertainment yesterday afternoon in the Young Men's Christian Association lec-

a passing notice. She began with a short reference to the Faust Saga, the legends of the student and magician which have almost bounted literature for at least four centuries. She protrayed the man who would master all knowledge, and, in the end, finds it a bitter and a fruitless trusstery, the man who, at last, formes a pact vith powers of evil, agreeing to give them his soul for the joys of life which he is to taste. She then passed to the Coethe rendering, which is the old legend. Transformed and vivided by passing through the mind of genius earliched by tanders, and perience.
